Dear members,

Summer is in full swing here at the Hunter and we have lots for you to see and do, both within and outside the walls of the museum.

In addition to the VIVID: A Fresh Take permanent collection exhibition which opened this spring in the museum's contemporary wing, we invite you to enjoy our current special exhibition Art Deco Glass from the David Huchthausen Collection. Drawn from a private collection and on loan from Tacoma, Washington's Museum of Glass, the Art Deco Glass exhibition features over 130 glass objects transporting visitors back in time to the popular art styles of the 1920s & 1930s, ranging from the organic shapes of Art Nouveau to the crisp, more geometric lines of Art Deco.

Outside the museum, passersby in the museum plaza or on the River Walk can view the newest addition to the Hunter's outdoor campus - Flights of Hope and Healing - a 37-foot mural in front of the '70s building created by local multimedia artist Rondell Crier.

And there's more to come! In August, the mansion stairwell and east wing art lounge will be reinstalled with a new installation by North Carolina-based artist April Flanders. Using printmaking, vinyl, and papercutting, Flanders will create two multi-layered, large-scale installations unique to the Hunter that explore the interaction of native and invasive species in ecosystems of Tennessee.

A wide assortment of exhibition-related programming complements the Art Deco Glass exhibit, including a gallery talk with Hunter Associate Curator Lauren Nye and Houston Museum Director Pam Reed, a glass bead embroidery "Create & Sip", an exhibition-inspired Sunday Studio for the whole family, and much more! To find the full itinerary of exhibition-related programs and save your spot at registration-required workshops, see page 6.

And, of course, it's not summer at the Hunter without art camps! Campers are learning in the galleries and creating all sorts of wonderful take-home art in the studios (with a little bit of outdoor fun as well). In early August, we're offering Itty Bitty half-day camp for our littlest artists (ages 3-5). A few spots remain in a couple of camp sessions throughout the summer so please visit our website to enroll your favorite youngster in a week of creativity at Hunter art camp.

In this summer's tourist season, we are proud to welcome guests from out of town, showing off Chattanooga's gem of a museum - from the special exhibitions we present and our remarkable permanent collection to our wonderful and innovative programs featuring local speakers and creatives. The financial support the museum receives from you, our members, makes possible all that we do. Please know how much we appreciate you. I hope you enjoy this issue of Art View and that we see you soon at your Hunter Museum.

Virginia Anne

ART DECO GLASS

From the David Huchthausen Collection

This summer, we invite visitors to take a trip through history and explore exquisite glasswork from the Art Deco period with Art Deco Glass from the David Huchthausen Collection, on view in the Hunter's temporary exhibition galleries through September 2.

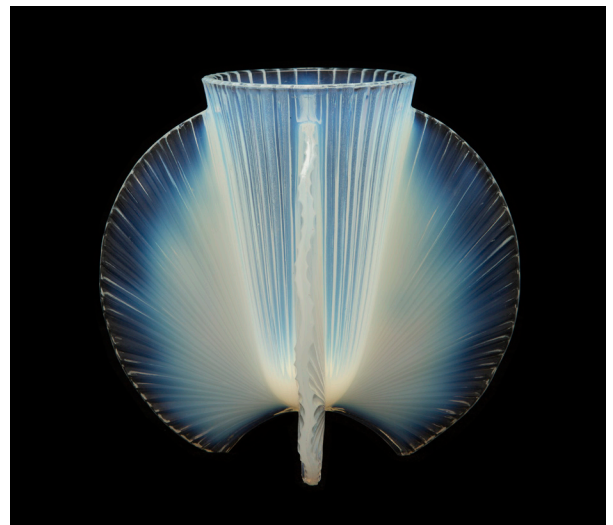

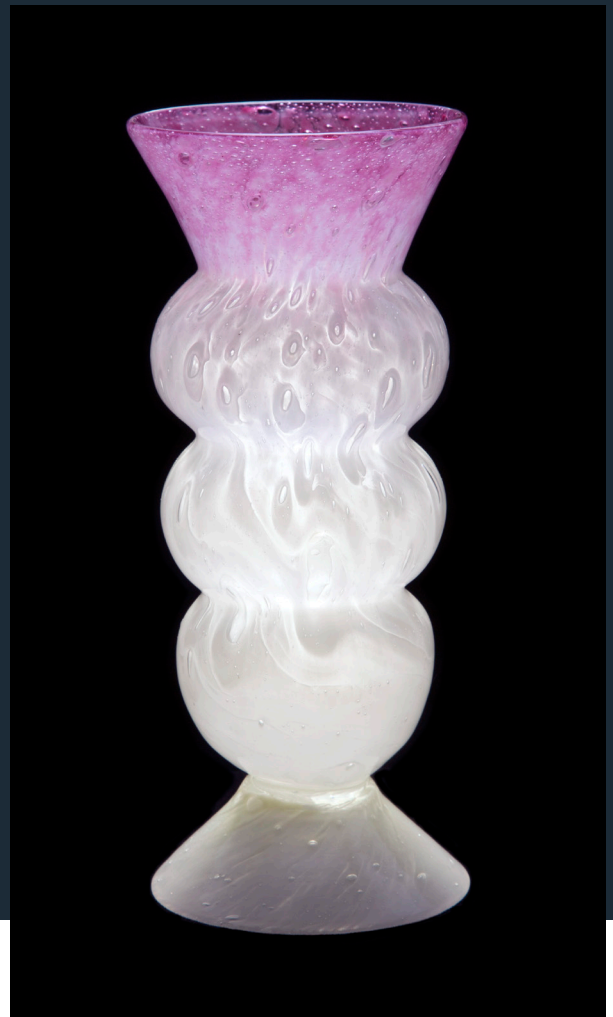

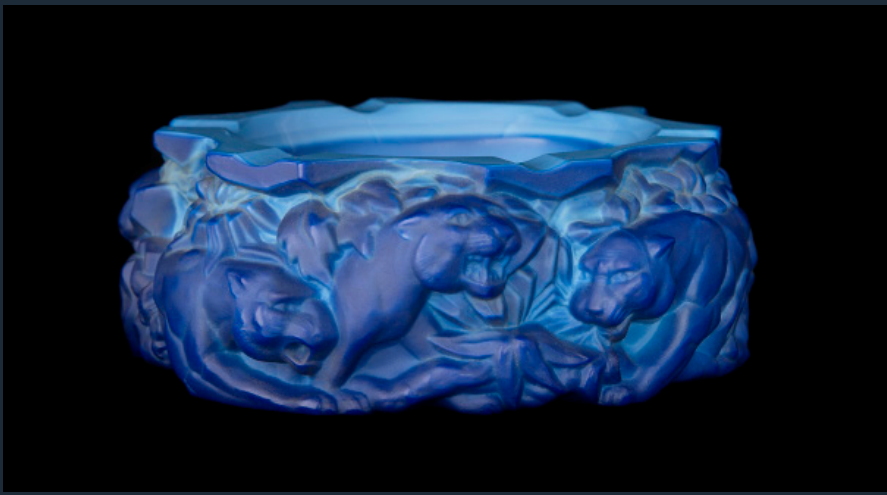

The works in this exhibition illustrate the progression of glasswork in the 20th century from the organic Art Nouveau era to the sleek, simplified forms and stylized naturalistic decoration of Art Deco. The Art Deco style originated in Paris around 1919 and rose to popularity between significant periods of violence in Europe, with many of the featured artists swept up in the tumult of World Wars I and II. This period saw rapid industrialization and social change, and artists responded to these societal shifts by applying more angular, stylized designs to functional objects, better reflecting the modern era. Glass artists featured in the exhibition created high-quality, hand-finished sculptural pieces using new mass production techniques that were more affordable for the growing middle class.

TOP: Verreries Schneider (French, founded 1913-closed 1981) and Charles Schneider (French, 1881-1953), Vase Nénuphar (Water Lily Vase) from Le Verre Français line, circa 1926-1929. Mold-blown glass with interior and exterior crushed and powdered glass frits and single surface acid cutting, 19 x 7 in. (48.3 x 17.8 cm). Collection of David Huchthausen. Photo by Lloyd Shugart.

LEFT: Pierre D'Avesn (French, 1901-1990), Charger with phoenix design, circa 1926-1931. Press-molded opal glass, 2 x 15 in. (5.1 x 38.1 cm). Collection of David Huchthausen.

Although many of the designers in this exhibition were European, their impact on American art persists to this day. Thanks to the ingenuity of Art Deco designers, the processes, patterns, and stylistic legacy of the 1920s and 30s can still be seen in contemporary glass and other art forms.

Art Deco Glass from the David Huchthausen Collection is organized by Museum of Glass, Tacoma, Washington.

Marketing support is provided by Chattanooga Tourism Co.

VIVID: A FRESH TAKE

RE-ENVISIONING THE AMERICAN STORY

On March 28th, the Hunter unveiled VIVID: A Fresh Take, a new permanent collection exhibition in the museum’s contemporary wing featuring a number of recent museum acquisitions. Included are large-scale paintings, sculptures, and mixed media pieces created by a diverse range of internationally-acclaimed artists including Toyin Ojih Odutola, Sanford Biggers, Rose B. Simpson, and Kehinde Wiley.

Thanks to generous funding from the Art Bridges Foundation’s Access for All Initiative, the reception celebrating the opening of the VIVID exhibition was free and open to all and welcomed almost 400 guests to the museum. In addition to the unveiling of the remarkable new works, the opening reception included music and dance performances, hands-on art activities, and docent-led tours of the museum.

VIVID invites viewers to explore a dynamic array of contemporary artistic expression, offering a contrast to established narratives around American identity, and provokes reflection about history and perspective, placing the American experience within the context of the global stage. If you haven’t already, come discover the Hunter’s newly acquired works in VIVID and explore the complex and multi-layered stories envisioned by contemporary American artists.

COLLECTION SPOTLIGHT

Rondell Crier [b. 1975], Flights of Hope and Healing, 2024. Paint, aluminum and glass on wood panel.

A COMMUNITY CANVAS WITH RONDELL CRIER

If you have visited the Bluff View Arts District within the last two months, you have noticed an addition to the exterior of the Hunter's 1970s building - a 37-foot mural titled Flights of Hope and Healing. Designed and created by local artist Rondell Crier, the painting speaks to shared histories and hopes for our community. Crier was chosen from a number of local artists who were invited to submit proposals for this project designed to engage outdoor audiences and enliven the museum's campus.

Featuring elements pertinent to the Hunter's location on the bluff, including stylized depictions of a sunset, a bird and water, Flights of Hope and Healing highlights the restorative powers of nature and community healing. Crier's commitment to involving the community in his creative process was essential to this piece. Students from the STEM School contributed several circular shapes floating throughout the work, emblematic of unity, interconnectedness and collective growth.

Thanks to generous funding from the Art Bridges Foundation's Access for All Initiative, the Hunter is excited to add Flights of Hope and Healing to the arts experiences available to all who pass through the Bluff View Arts District as well as museum visitors.

COMMUNITY CONNECTIONS

ADULT PROGRAMS

Making the museum more accessible to more people is one of the Hunter Museum's strategic objectives. Generous funding from Art Bridges Foundation's Access for All initiative has allowed the museum to open its doors to the community like never before, by expanding existing access to well-loved programs like Throwback Thursday, which now offers free admission to the entire museum from 4-8pm on the first Thursday of every month. And while the museum's on-site access programming is significant, the Hunter's impact extends far beyond the museum's walls.

Thanks to the generous support of Unum's Social Justice Fund and the Lillian L. Colby Foundation, the Hunter Museum's off-site educational programming continues to connect people of all ages and abilities with creativity and hands-on art experiences. By intentionally creating relationships with underserved communities, the museum provides art education to those who may otherwise not have access.

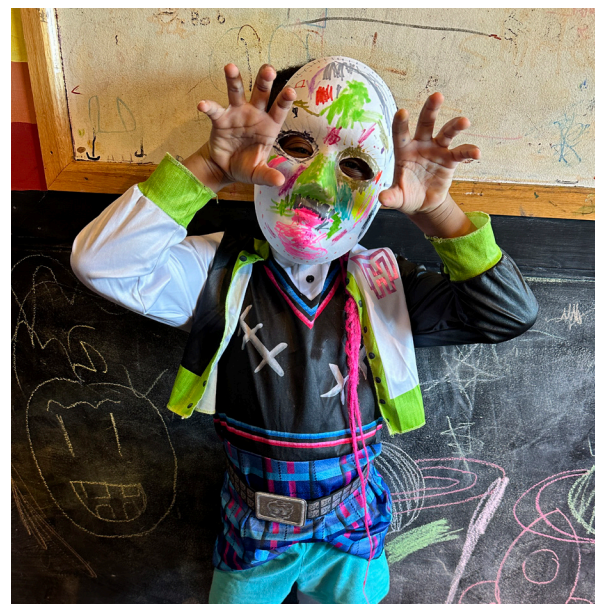

KIDS' PROGRAMS

Over the past school year, the Hunter has maintained ongoing outreach programs at eight area recreation centers and three Title 1 elementary schools across the Chattanooga area. The Hunter also works with organizations like Alexian Memory Care and The Next Door to bring the museum experience to those who cannot travel to the Bluff View Arts District. Using hands-on activities and live demonstrations, museum educators engage Chattanoogaans with the arts and promote social-emotional health and learning.

HUNTER IN THE NEWS

WHAT GUESTS SAID ABOUT NETWORKED NATURE

According to Networked Nature survey results, the special exhibition was well received, with over 90% of respondents stating that they would recommend the show to a friend. Just over 54% of survey responders were first-time museum visitors. Here are samples of guest responses from the survey:

"Wow. I never thought that technology could feel so human."

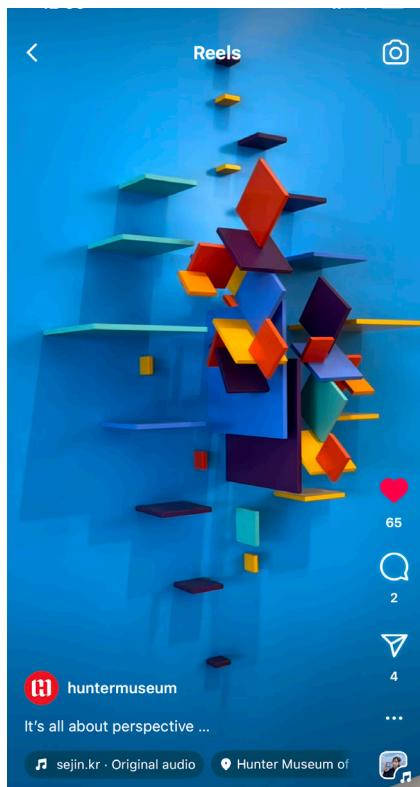

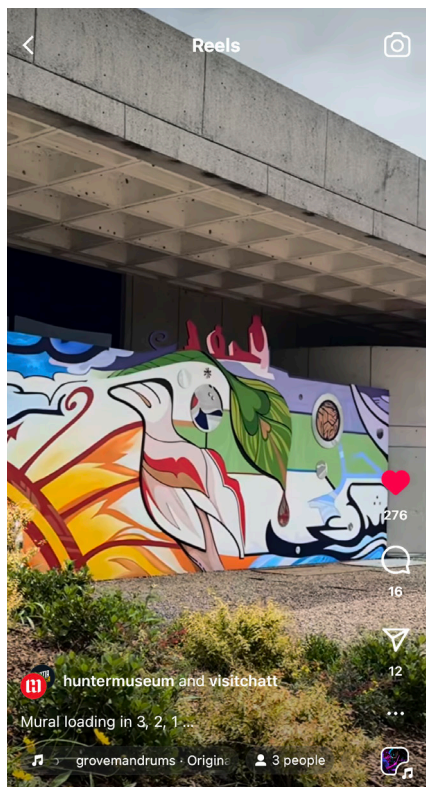

"It's not a concept I've come across before; felt new + fresh."

"I'm Gen-Z and I have a complicated relationship with technology and the internet - this made me feel seen."

"I had previously thought that AI had no place in the art world, but my mind has certainly been changed."

NEW FACES AT THE HUNTER

Allie McGilberry is the new Design and Web Specialist. Originally from Nashville, TN, she received her BFA in Graphic Design from the University of Alabama and worked in Nashville for 2 years before moving to Chattanooga for a job at the Hunter. She enjoys portrait drawing, coffee, and listening to spooky podcasts.

Noah Yoshida is the newest Special Events Coordinator at the Hunter. Noah moved to Chattanooga from California a little over two years ago. With a background in the culinary arts, Noah loves to cook for himself and friends. He also loves the water so you can always find him by the river, lake, or pool.

NEW ITEMS AT THE MUSEUM STORE

Don't forget to check out the Museum Store during your visit, and take a piece of the museum home with you! We've just updated our inventory to include new products featuring artists and styles from our current exhibitions and permanent collection.

SUPPORT THE HUNTER MUSEUM WITH AN ARTS PLATE

Did you know arts specialty plates support the Tennessee Arts Commission and local art organizations like the Hunter Museum? Show your support by swapping out your old plate for a new one from your local county clerk's office!
